Notice Regarding Selection as a Constituent of the Tokyo Stock Price Index (TOPIX)

Nippon Seiki Co., Ltd. (the “Company”) hereby announce that the Company’s shares have been selected as a constituent of the Tokyo Stock Price Index (TOPIX), which is calculated and published by JPX Market Innovation & Research, Inc.

TOPIX is a market benchmark that broadly covers the Japanese equity market and offers functionality as an investable index. The index represents changes in aggregate market capitalization relative to a base value of 100 as of January 4, 1968. It is widely used as a key economic indicator reflecting trends in the Japanese economy, as well as a benchmark for financial products such as exchange-traded funds (ETFs).

The Company has been newly selected as a TOPIX constituent as part of the ongoing revisions to TOPIX. The Company will continue striving to further enhance its corporate value and meet the expectations of its shareholders and investors.

Revisions to the Tokyo Stock Price Index (TOPIX)

The revisions to TOPIX were initiated following the restructuring of the Tokyo Stock Exchange’s market segments. The revisions are intended to further enhance the index’s market representativeness and functionality as an investable index while ensuring its continuity.

This revision follows the completion of the first stage of revisions at the end of January 2025. Taking into account the substantial amount of assets linked to TOPIX and the index’s widespread use, the second stage of revision is being implemented to further enhance its broad market coverage and functionality as an investable index while maintaining continuity.

Under the second stage, constituents will be subject to periodic reviews covering all Tokyo Stock Exchange’s market segments, namely the Prime Market, Standard Market and Growth Market, with greater emphasis placed on liquidity.
